

Chicago Style

No matter where your information comes from, you always need to cite your sources. The 15th edition of the The Chicago Manual of Style or the 6th edition of Kate Turabian's Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses, and Dissertations both ask that information be cited in 2 different ways--in footnotes or endnotes referenced in the text and in a bibliography at the end of the paper.

Footnotes or Endnotes:

Book with One Author:

1. Nancy F. Cott, The Grounding of Modern Feminism (New Haven: Yale University Press, 1987), 109.

Book with Multiple Authors:

2. Paul C. Stern, Oran R. Young, and Daniel Druckman, eds., Global Environmental Change: Understanding the Human Dimensions (Washington, DC: National Academy Press, 1982), 53.

Books with more than three authors should use the first author's name and the phrase "and others."

Chapter from a Book:

3. Jean-Pierre Worms, "The French Student Movement," in Student Activism, ed. Alexander De Conde (New York: Scribner, 1971), 72.

Journal Article:

4. Richard Jackson, "Running Down the Up-Escalator: Regional Inequality in Papua New Guinea," Australian Geographer 14 (May 1979): 180.

Article from a Newspaper:

5. Tyler Marshall, "200th Birthday of Grimms Celebrated," Los Angeles Times, March 15, 1985, sec. 1A.

Because a newspaper may include several editions, and items may be moved or eliminated in these editions, page numbers are best omitted.

Article from a Popular Magazine:

6. Lisa Helem, "Child's Play? No Way!" Newsweek, July 19, 2004, 9.

Encyclopedia Entry:

Signed:

7. James A. Porter, "African Negro Art," in Encyclopedia of the Arts, eds. Dagobert D. Runes and Harry G. Schrickel (New York: Philosophical Library, 1946), 63.

Unsigned:

8. Encyclopedia Americana, 1975 ed., s.v. "Sumatra."

Book Review:

9. Robert J. Schneller, Jr., review of A History of the Confederate Navy, by Raimondo Luraghi, American Historical Review 102, no. 4 (Oct. 1997): 1232.

Government Document:

10. Joint Committee on the Investigation of the Pearl Harbor Attack, Investigation of the Pearl Harbor Attack, 79th Congress, 2nd sess., 1946, 17.

Citation of a Work Discussed in Another Source:

11. "Grant of New Netherland, etc. to the Duke of York," in vol. 2, Documents Relative to the Colonial History of New York, ed. E.B. O'Callaghan, 295-298 (Albany: Weed, Parsons, 1853-1887), quoted in Sara Stidstone Gronim, "Geography and Persuasion: Maps in British Colonial New York," William and Mary Quarterly, Third Series, 58, no. 2 (April 2001): 376.

Web Page:

12. Baha'i International Community. "The Baha'i Faith." The Baha'i World. <http://www.bahai.org/article-1-2-0-1.html> (accessed July 20, 2004).

For online sources other than periodicals, include these elements as can be determined: author, title of page, title or owner of site, and URL. Date of access may also be included.

Online Magazine or Newspaper:

13. Lawrence Osborne, "Poison Pen," Salon, March 29, 2000, <http://www.salon.com/books/it/2000/03/29/kaplan/index.html> (accessed July 10, 2004).

If a URL is likely to be rendered invalid because the page is time-sensitive or because the article is accessible by subscription only, give the date you accessed the information, and give the main URL of the website (i.e. <http://www.nyt.com>) rather than the page-specific URL.

Electronic Copy of a Journal Article from a Library Database:

14. Ilan Rachun, "The Meaning of 'Revolution' in the English Revolution (1648-1660)," Journal of the History of Ideas 56, no. 2, 195-215, <http://www.jstor.org> (accessed July 10, 2004).

Use this form for citing materials from Academic Search Premier, LexisNexis, JSTOR, and Project Muse as well as other databases where you can access full-text articles. Since these databases are accessed for a fee, you may choose to give only the main entrance of the service (i.e. <http://search.epnet.com> for Ebscohost databases), particularly if the article-level URL is unstable.
