SURVEY OF PENNSYLVANIA
DEMOCRATS ON THE 2008
PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY

KEY FINDINGS REPORT

APRIL, 2008

KEY FINDINGS:

1. With the Pennsylvania Presidential Primary under three weeks away, Senator Hillary Clinton maintains a double digit lead over Senator Obama in the Democratic race.
2. Democratic voters in the Keystone State were most likely to rank the economy as the key issue in terms of their vote in the Democratic Primary, with the Iraq War and health care also prominently mentioned.
3. Pennsylvania Democrats have generally favorable views of both Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama. However, Obama receives a larger percentage of unfavorable ratings than Clinton among likely voters in the state.
4. Keystone State Democrats are evenly divided on which of their candidates is more likely to beat John McCain in the general election.
5. Democratic voters in the Commonwealth are more likely to want Hillary Clinton to choose Barack Obama as her running mate than they are to support Obama choosing Clinton as his Vice President.
6. A majority of Democratic voters in Pennsylvania do not believe Hillary Clinton should drop out of the race if she loses the Pennsylvania Primary.

METHODOLOGY: The following key findings report summarizes data collected in a telephone survey of 406 likely voters in Pennsylvania from March 27 to April 2, 2008. Individual households throughout the state were selected randomly for inclusion in the study. The sample of phone numbers used in the survey was generated by Genesys Sampling Systems of Ft. Washington, PA. This number of completions results in a margin of error of +/- 5% at the 95% confidence interval. However the margin of error for all sub groups (i.e. women, Catholics) is larger due to smaller sample size. Percentages throughout the survey have been rounded to the nearest percentage, thus many totals in the results will not equal 100. The survey questionnaire was designed by Christopher Borick, Ph.D. of the Muhlenberg College Institute of Public Opinion in consultation with staff members of the Morning Call. Analysis and report writing were completed by the Muhlenberg College Institute of Public Opinion under the direction of Dr. Borick.

ANALYSIS

With the highly anticipated Democratic primary under three weeks a way, Senator Hillary Clinton maintains a 10 point lead over Senator Barack Obama among likely voters in the Keystone State. Clinton's lead in Pennsylvania is statistically equal to our last statewide poll in February, and provides evidence that the former First Lady remains the frontrunner in the Commonwealth's April 22nd primary.

THE CONTEST: CLINTON V. OBAMA

As the battle for the Democratic nomination for president moves toward a major showdown in Pennsylvania, Hillary Clinton is maintaining a double digit lead over Barack Obama among the state's likely Democratic voters. With a growing chorus calling for the Senator from New York to step aside in the race, the outcome of the primary has taken on even greater importance in Clinton's bid to win her party's nomination. The results of the latest Morning Call/Muhlenberg College shows Clinton's lead is consistent with other recent polls in the Commonwealth.

TABLE ONE

Pennsylvania Democratic Primary Obama vs Clinton

	Obama	Clinton	Undecided /Other	Spread
Quinnipiac (2/06 to 2/12)	36%	52%	12%	16%
Muhlenberg/MCall (2/09 to 2/17)	31%	45%	24%	14%
Quinnipiac (3/10 to 3/16)	41%	53%	6%	12%
Franklin and Marshall (3/11 to 3/16)	35%	51%	14%	16%
Survey USA (3/29 to 3/31)	41%	53%	6%	12%
Quinnipiac (3/24 to 3/31)	41%	50%	9%	9%
Muhlenberg/MCall (3/26 to 4/2)	41%	51%	9%	10%

The findings from the poll indicate a continued gender gap within the Democratic presidential primary in Pennsylvania. While Senators Obama and Clinton are running almost even among male Democrats in the Commonwealth, the former First Lady holds a substantial 15 point lead among the Commonwealth's female Democratic voters.

TABLE TWO

Pennsylvania Democratic Primary Candidate Preference by Gender

	Obama	Clinton	Undecided /Other	Spread
Male	45%	48%	7%	Clinton + 3%
Female	39%	54%	6%	Clinton +15%

Another demographic factor that appears to underlie Clinton's lead in Pennsylvania is her success among older voters in the state. While trailing Barack Obama by a significant margin (40 points) among Democrats under the age of 35, Clinton maintains a 9 point lead among voters between 35 and 55, and a 21 point margin among voters 56 and older. Given the large size of the population of older Pennsylvanians, Senator Clinton's overall lead appears largely the product of her continued success among this populous voting block.

35-55	41%	50%	9%	Clinton +9%
56 and Older	37%	58%	6%	Clinton +21%

Hillary Clinton’s overall lead in Pennsylvania also seems to be supported by her success among Democrats in lower income brackets. In particular, the former First Lady holds a 14 point lead among Democratic voters with household income below $40,000 annually. Comparatively, Clinton and Obama run even among individuals with household income over $80,000 per year.

Over $80,000	47%	48%	5%	Clinton +1%

FAVORABILITY RATINGS

Over the past month both the Clinton and Obama campaigns have been hampered by numerous allegations and incidents. The Obama campaign has been forced to address criticisms regarding the Senator’s relationship with the Reverend Jeremiah Wright, while Clinton has struggled amidst allegations that she was dishonest about her trip to Bosnia in the 1990s. Despite these incidents both Obama and Clinton continue to be viewed generally favorably by Democratic voters in the Keystone State, with Clinton maintaining a 77% favorability rating and Obama viewed favorably by 72% of Democrats. Interestingly, Clinton and Obama were viewed favorably by a majority of voters who are planning to vote against them in the primary election. As can be seen in Tables Five and Six below, 54% of Clinton voters view Obama favorably, while 55% of Obama voters view Clinton favorably

KEY ISSUES IN THE PRIMARY

Pennsylvania Democrats identified the economy as the most important issue in their choice of presidential candidates. Over 1 out of 3 likely voters in the Democratic Primary identified the economy as the key issue in making their decision regarding the election. In fact, the combined issues of health care and the War in Iraq were identified by fewer voters (30%) than the economy alone (34%). No other issue received mention by more than 4% of those surveyed.

AFTER THE PRIMARY

The Morning Call/Muhlenberg College Poll asked Democratic voters in the Commonwealth a series of questions regarding the aftermath of the primary season. Much has been made of the importance of the Pennsylvania Primary to the chances of Hillary Clinton winning her party’s nomination. As the largest remaining primary state, Pennsylvania serves as an opportunity for Senator Clinton to close the gap in delegates won in primaries and caucuses. Because of its importance it has been suggested that a loss in the Pennsylvania primary may be enough to push Clinton from the race. However, a majority of Democratic voters in the Commonwealth indicated that Clinton should not drop out if Obama wins the April 22nd election. Not surprisingly, there is significant difference among Clinton and Obama supporters on this matter, with only 1 in 4 Clinton supporters indicating she should drop out if she loses in Pennsylvania, while 6 out of 10 Obama supporters think she should quit after a loss in the Keystone State.

TABLE EIGHT

“Should Hillary Clinton Drop out of the Race if she loses the Pennsylvania Primary?”

	Should Drop Out	Should Not Drop Out	Not Sure
Overall	52%	39%	9%
Obama Voters	60%	35%	5%
Clinton Voters	26%	68%	7%

As the Democratic primary has proved very competitive between Senators Obama and Clinton the possibility of a presidential ticket between the two candidates has become the topic of much conversation. Respondents to our survey of likely Democratic voters in Pennsylvania finds that a majority think that Hillary Clinton should ask Obama to be her running mate, but a majority think that Barack Obama should not invite Clinton on a presidential ticket with him. As with other issues, there are strong differences between Obama and Clinton supporters regarding the possibilities of a joint ticket. While Clinton supporters view the possibility of a joint ticket fairly positively, Obama supporters are much less favorable to the so called “Dream Ticket.” In particular, Obama supporters were much more opposed to their candidate inviting Clinton on to the ticket than Clinton supporters were opposed to having their choice ask Obama aboard a ticket.

Finally, the question of which candidate would be more likely to be John McCain in the general election was asked to survey respondents. The results show that Democratic voters in the Commonwealth are highly divided on which candidate is more likely to beat the presumptive GOP nominee this fall. More specifically 35% of respondents felt Obama would be more likely to win against McCain while 33% chose Clinton as matching up better with the Republican nominee. Expectedly, supporters of Clinton and Obama overwhelmingly believe their preference would be more likely to win in the November election.

CONCLUSION

With two and a half weeks left until the Pennsylvania primary Senator Hillary Clinton remains the front runner in the Commonwealth. Her advantages among women, older and working class Pennsylvanians has allowed her to maintain an advantage over Barack Obama in this crucial primary state. Meanwhile, both Obama and Clinton run nearly even among male voters in the Keystone state, with Obama continuing to perform well among younger voters in Pennsylvania.
